

Trish Hall

Trish is an Accredited Partnership Broker, Practitioner Trainer, Mentor, Chair of the Mentor's Community of Practice, and an occasional Accreditation Examiner.

Trish places a high value on being a Practice Partner because she has experienced the benefits of co-working on 'what is needed now and next?' She believes we deepen our practice by drawing out and supporting our intuitive knowledge, using questions to hold space, doing 'what if' planning, tapping into the heart of the matter; reflecting on what happened and why. Trish brings over 15 years of experience as both an external partnership broker at partners 'key milestones' in 'for-mission' and government organisations, businesses, tribal entities, and civil society. A New Zealander with partnering experience at home, across the Pacific and in Australia, Trish has remotely mentored 35 partnership brokers from across the world, in all sectors as they pursued their professional credentials as Accredited Partnership Brokers. Trish's particular strengths are in supporting strategic thinking about partnering, scoping and building, in revising/refreshing partnerships; building capability for partnering and designing processes that engage heads and hearts. She is a director of a boutique business, has served on the boards of seven NGOs, and is a mother of two fascinating adults! Trish is fluent in English and has a beginner's knowledge of Māori.
